

Protect Home and Community-Based Services in Pennsylvania

What's Happening

Home and Community-Based Services (HCBS) help Pennsylvanians with intellectual and developmental disabilities live at home, stay safe, and participate in their communities.

Under the 2025 federal budget reconciliation law, reductions to Medicaid funding could cause severe cuts to essential programs (e.g., waiver-, in-home services), which are currently classified as optional services.

Quick Facts

More than 11,000 Pennsylvanians with intellectual and developmental disabilities remain on waiting lists for crucial home and community-based services.

These waiting lists include individuals in emergency, critical, and planning needs categories.

What's at Risk

1. Loss of independence: People with disabilities may lose the ability to remain in their homes if home-based care is reduced or eliminated.
2. Family crisis: Parents and caregivers may lose respite and essential support services.
3. Worsening staffing shortages: Cuts to Medicaid provider rates reduce pay for Direct Support Professionals, worsening the care crisis.
4. Civil rights setback: Weakening HCBS funding undermines the Olmstead v. L.C. decision, which guarantees the right to live in the least restrictive setting.

How Pennsylvanians Can Act

- Contact your legislators to request full funding for Medicaid, HCBS, and elimination of the waiting list.
- Share your story with SJAC and The Arc of Pennsylvania about how waiting lists and Medicaid cuts impact your family.
- Support direct care workers and local advocacy groups and consider volunteering with agencies that provide home and community-based services.
- Every voice matters.
 - Protecting HCBS means protecting the right of Pennsylvanians with disabilities to live with dignity and independence.
